Course Description:

This colloquium will provide Doctoral students and faculty members with opportunities to share their research and to exchange ideas within a collegial framework.

The culmination of the course will be a series of departmental seminars toward the end of the term at which each of the participants will present a paper dealing with issues of Identity creation, historical continuity and Place Theory as they relate to religion.

Each presentation will be approximately 30 minutes followed by ten minutes of discussion and response.

A number of one-hour sessions will be held early in the term for organizational planning, to choose methodology readings, etc. The details of the schedule will be announced in consultation with the colloquium participants.

On March 26, 2012 we will be hosting a keynote lecture by Julius Lipner, Professor of Hinduism and the Comparative Study of Religion at the University of Cambridge, UK, tentatively titled "Time, Place, and Identity: Text and Transformation."

Course Requirements:

Every PhD student is the Department of Religious Studies is required to present a paper for this colloquium and to participate in all the sessions.

The grade for the course is Pass/Fail. No letter grade will be assigned or calculated into the GPA.
