Course Description	This course will describe and analyze the thoughts and actions of humans, as embodied in the communities and traditions of Jews, Christians, and Muslims. The descriptive phase of the course (relying on the textbook’s presentation) will provide a basic knowledge of the discourses of Judaism, Christianity, and Islam. The analytical phase will offer a naturalized understanding of these discourses that fix the shared attentions of their adherents. In keeping with the adopted mandate issued by B. Lincoln, frequent critique will be raised on the subject of “western religion” and its study: When one permits those whom one studies to define the terms in which they will be understood, suspends one’s interest in the temporal and contingent, or fails to distinguish between ‘truths,’ ‘truth-claims,’ and ‘regimes of truth,’ one has ceased to function as a historian or scholar. In that moment, a variety of roles are available: some perfectly capable (amanuensis, collector, friend and advocate) and some less appealing (cheerleader, voyeur, retailer of import goods). None however should be confused with scholarship. (“Theses on Method,” Method and Theory in the Study of Religion 8, 225-7; 1996)
