Grimes, Ronald L. The Beginnings in Ritual Studies 3rd. Waterloo: Ritual Studies International, 2010.
Bell, Catherine. Ritual: Perspectives and Dimensions. 1997. Repr. Oxford: Oxford Press, 2009.

Course Description:

This course is an introduction to the interdisciplinary field of Ritual Studies, specifically as it has developed within Religious Studies. Ritual is a long-standing interest within Religious Studies; however, detailed studies of rituals and ritual theory did not commence until the 1970s. Prior academic examinations saw ritual as the source of religion, culture, and/or mythology; thus scholars limited ritual to the early stages of social evolution. Scholars viewed ritual as a primitive aspect of civilization that was maintained in the present due to adherence to tradition. However, with the development of social functionalism, anthropologists and sociologists re-evaluated ritual and advocated its significance in maintaining religious cohesion and identity. Currently, ritual is understood as the examination of embodied action or performative phenomenon within a group and, while it tends to be associated with religion, the analysis of rituals now extends to other group activities and provides a lens through which various disciplines may examine, and comprehend diverse social behavior such as; spectator sports, rave parties, bridal showers, goddess circles, and the delivery of babies.

Outcomes:

This course is designed to familiarize students with the assumptions, theories, methods, and approaches used in the study of ritual within Religious Studies. This will include a survey of the early history of the study of ritual and the current theories associated with the field of ritual studies. The course will present a basic understanding of ritual activities including; rites of passage, rites of affliction, calendrical rites, pilgrimage, and rites surrounding food. Further, students, using the various theories, methods and approaches from the contemporary study of ritual, will examine and analyze performative group activities and present their analyses as part of the assignments for the course. Therefore, the course will require students to use their understanding to synthesize, analyze and interpret specific forms of human behavior.

Self-Directed Study

Students are expected to develop skills of time management, organization and independent learning through assigned readings, preparation for exams and in developing a research essay.

Course Requirements:

- 1. Exam. (Tuesday October 16, 2012) 30%
This exam will evaluate students' comprehension of the basics of ritual studies.
The exam will cover all lecture material from Sept 11-October 11, Grimes. Pp. 1-63; Bell, Pp, 1-169. The format of the exam will include: short answer, definitions, and essay question(s).
- 2. Application essay (Due: November 15, 2012) 25%
Students will view two films. One on November 6 and another on November 8th.
They will select one of these films for analysis. They will use insights gained from the beginning of the course; along with additional insights introduced in the lectures from October 18-31; and Grimes, Pp, 65-136. They will write an essay that analyzes the film using insights presented from ritual studies.

The analysis will be presented in thesis-styled essay (1,000 – 1,500 word or 5-6 pages double-spaced in 10 or 12 pt font following Chicago or Turabian style guide. See: <http://library.ucalgary.ca/research-support/citing-writing/popular-citation-styles>.

3. Research Component

a. Research Statement & Annotated Bibliography (Due: November 20, 2012) 15%

Annotated Bibliography will be in proper format following Chicago or Turabian Style guide (see above link) and include:

- One primary source, which will be the group activity one is examining,
- 3 academic journal articles (minimum)
- 3 academic books (minimum). NOT INCLUDING THE TEXTBOOKS

The research statement will describe briefly the group activity and the specific insights or questions that the researcher wishes to find using ritual studies. (Minimum: 250 words)

b. Presentation of Research (Due: December 6, 2012) 30%

Due to the interdisciplinary nature of both religious studies and ritual studies, students may select from one of four options for the presentation of their research. More information about the specific requirements for their option will be provided.

- Thesis-styled Paper 2,500 words or 10 pages double-spaced in 10 or 12 pt font.
- Web Site with text, visuals and links.
- Oral Presentation with the incorporation of handouts, Power-point and/or other visuals.
- Creation of a ritual with a description of the actions, sensual environment and an explanation of the actions and environment.

All presentations of research must adhere to Chicago/Turabian Style Guide. All will also be graded for spelling and grammar, and proper format.

The adherence to deadlines is taken as a serious requirement and responsibility of the students in this course.

There will be no Registrar scheduled final examination for this course.

Course Protocol

Research Components and Essay: A penalty of 25% per day (including weekends) will be deducted from late assignments. The application essay, and research components must be delivered physically to the instructor on the assigned due date, unless alternative arrangements have been made. Students are advised to keep a back-up of their own work.

Deferred exams are a privilege and are granted only due to extraordinary circumstances such as a death of a close family member or severe illness. Documentation will be required. Students who miss the exam MUST contact the instructor within 24 hours.

Out of consideration for the class as a whole, there is no extra credit in this course.

Grading

A numerical mark will be given for each course requirement. A letter grade will be assigned on the following number and letter grade scheme:

A+	100 - 96	A	95 - 90	A-	89 - 85
B+	84 - 80	B	79 - 75	B-	74 - 70
C+	69 - 65	C	64 - 60	C-	59 - 55
D+	54 - 53	D	52-50	F	Under 50

N.B. All written assignments will be graded with regard to both form and content.
