Course Description

This course uses the work of Marshall McLuhan to help make sense of the use – and refusal – of New Media as played out German academic, institutional and everyday contexts. Pre-session lecture and assignment will introduce Marshall McLuhan and explain the importance of his work to media theorists everywhere but especially in Germany. Several seminars and lectures held in Berlin will be held jointly and/or hosted by Berlin-based lecturers on Media and McLuhan, including HTW Applied University and/or the Free University in Berlin, as well as New Media start-ups and incubator groups such as the ThoughtWorks group in Prenzlauerberg. Where possible, students will also work with their German counterparts on short assignments. The course is capstoned instructionally with McLuminations – a public event held annually in the Marshall McLuhan Salon at the Canadian Embassy in Berlin, where media experts gather once a year to discuss the relevance/implications of McLuhan’s work today. Quizzes and journal exercises based on everyday observation of media use in Germany by individual, institutional and commercial elements of society will deepen the overall appreciation of media study and provide a general contrast in the cultures of New Media use in Europe and North America. Institutional visits to Google in Berlin, the Bundestag and other venues underscore the manner and extent to which Germany is still adopting – and refusing – New Media in the 21st century.

Additional Information

- No prerequisites; all activities and guest lectures delivered in English
- The course takes a seminar format in which students are encouraged to lead and shape the discussion by engaging readings, guest lecturers and their German counterparts
- This is a thinking-intensive course

Objectives of the Course

To build awareness and appreciation of the issues and effects of New Media as informed by the influence Marshall McLuhan's work continues to play in shaping the German perspective on this technology. Specifically, students will be able to:

- Articulate the key constructs and distinctions in McLuhan's work, including "global village," "the medium is the message," "hot and cold media" and the tribalization of contemporary society
- Gain experience working with German students in collaboratively designing research and media campaigns that leverage McLuhan's core ideas;
- Become critical observers of media use in the everyday context by bringing McLuhan's idea to bear;

Plagiarism

Using any source whatsoever without clearly documenting it is a serious academic offense. Consequences include failure on the assignment, failure in the course and possibly suspension or expulsion from the university.

You must document not only direct quotations but also paraphrases and ideas where they appear in your text. A reference list at the end is insufficient by itself. In-text citations must be provided, and readers must be able to tell exactly where your words and ideas end and other people's words and ideas begin. Wording taken directly from a source must be enclosed within quotation marks (or, for long quotations, presented in the format prescribed by the documentation style you are using). Paraphrased information must not follow the original wording and sentence structure with only slight word substitutions here and there. These requirements apply to all assignments and sources, including those in non-traditional formats such as Web pages or visual media.

For information on citation and documentation styles (including APA, Chicago, IEEE, MLA, and others), visit the links provided at <https://ucalgary.ca/ssc/resources/writing-support/436>. If you have questions about how to document sources, please consult your instructor or the Writing Centre (3rd Floor TFDL, <http://www.ucalgary.ca/ssc/writing-support>).

Academic Misconduct

For information on academic misconduct and its consequences, please see the University of Calgary Calendar at <http://www.ucalgary.ca/pubs/calendar/current/k.html>

Research Ethics

Whenever you perform research with human participants (i.e. surveys, interviews, observation) as part of your university studies, you are responsible for following university research ethics guidelines. Your instructor must review and approve of your research plans and supervise your research.
